THE REPUBLICAN UPLIFT

- THE Philadelphia Priblic Ledger, which still stands pat, discusses the future of the G. O. P. in an editorial headed, "How Shall the Republican Party Uplift Itself?"

In the multitude of counsel there is almost chorus to the effects that the old Republicanparty hims become very progressive." The wisdom of that advice can only be determined after the definition of the word progreasive has been heard. If lo progressive is meant-honest straightforward conduct; the sefection of strong and Bonorable men as leaders: the abatement of the old abuses incident to callous old ningstors and their machines and a Scheral houses bearing and formand wealing program, the proposal is sound.

But can the Republican party meet even that test? Obviously not. It is still owned and officered by the Root-Penrose-Crane-Barnes crowd who wrecked it last year. Were those men ever known to do anything toward "the abatement of the old abuses incident to callous ringsters: did they select "strong and honorable men as leaders?" Do they show any evidence of an intention to do these things now? And mail they dillat reform or are displaced low is the property, the Republican party:

He has one trait which under other carumstances would be counted a tracerning one abilian but in his case it only serves to make him more dangerous.

the treaty of Berlin, which suded the Russo-Turkish war in 1878, took Bulgaria away from Turkey and made it a nominally independent principality. But the independence was only nonlinal, for its dummy prince was to be chosen by the Powers and confirmed by the Sublime Porte. In 1882 the death of the then reigning Prince created a vacancy which the Powers had some difficulty in filling. No eligible prince in Europe wanted the job, for it was a place without power and with very little glors. The chances of being assassinated were considered excellent, for Bulgaria was a half-civilized country, a hothed of political chicanery, even worse than it is now.

Finally however a feceptive candidate was found in the person of Ferdinand, soil of Prince Augitable of Saxe-Goburg Cigiba and the Princess Clementine of Orleans, who was a daughter of King Louis Phillippe of France. Herdinand was 20 years old, with a reputation not benen than it should have been but with plenty of ambitton and a good deal of a lilly of a kind unmixed with morals,:

Affis first task validities repaiding toop are his adopted country, and be succeeded marvelously. He built roads, encouraged industry of various kinds and greatly improved the condition of the people. He organized and equipped the finest arms in the Balkans, a fact attested in the recent war with Turkey. It is said that bribery and infimidation have been his finfailing resuurces in getting his parliament to give I toking of another sort him what he wanted, and at any rate lie 3. usually got it.

An illuminating sidelight on Ferdinand's character is revealed in his dealings with Russia. When he was elected to the Butgarian throne he made a solemn agreement with the Powers to bring up his eldest son in the Roman Catholic maith." But Some after the birth of an beir he calmit torgon the promise and had the child baptized in the Orthodox Green's church, an order for curty favor feets Paisla. From lears agaof "Czar of the Buigar" -and the Poolers formally recognized him as such.

Ferdinand is given credit for the mase terly diplomacy whereby the four principal. Balkan nations were a year ago united in an alliance against Turker , tespite their boter pears, was to accomplish by this alliance the otherwise impossible task of driving the Turks out of Europe, and then to use his presumed superior military strength to rob his allies of their share of the spoils.

If he liast been successful in this it would have made Bulgaria dominant in southeastern Europe, and Ferdinand would be ruler of a military power which would not have to ask the consent of the other Powers. whenever it wanted to make a move. It was a brilliant scheme- or would have been if it had not failed. Fortunately Greece. Servia and Rollmania saw through 4 in time, and in a brief month of savage fight ing they have reduced Bulgaria to a state of helplessness. In point of territorial rains her position probably will be no better than it was before the beginning of the war with Turkey, and her prestige is gone. As for Ferdinand, he will be lucky if he succeeds in holding his throne. His fate is that which in common justice ought to come to every trickster of his type, whether he happens to be on a throne or in an humbler. political position, but which, unfortunately, is usually deferred to the next world.

HELPING THE SMALL INVESTOR

THE small investor of the past was fleeced as expeditiously and unceremoniously as possible, but the time is at hand when he is to be the pet lamb, not faftened for the slaughter, but to share in the good things of the feast.

There are good reasons for this altered attitude. Business enterprise and good government alike can only prosper by the good-will and support of the general public which in recent years has learned to defend itself and insist upon its rights. The great trusts like the DuPont powder company, the ries corporation, the telephone consolidation, are encouraging their employes. to invest their savings in the business which gives them employment. Cach year they receive a bonus in the shape of stocks in the company, whether they invest or not. Business finds that this pays, for self-interest produces loyalty.

Yet there are multifudes of small investors entirely upon their own resources and at the mercy of the pirates of the stock market. These must not only be protected, but given every assistance postibly. in step ig safe, constitutive, but altractive investments. France is the paradise of the small investor and but for that fact, this volatile nation would be as tempest-to-sed as a Central American republic.

The conservatism of the small investor will give stability to our government and at the same time will compel hig husiness to confine its activities to legitimate and honest enterprise, and discourage the explonation of the general public made up largely of the small investor himself.
